Build a mobile app or game that you think other mobile app or game developers would want to build. Don't be afraid to be creative! Here are some ideas that might get you started: TradeShows: Define what your app does in the context of a business trade show. Provide info on who will be attending your event and what attendees will be looking for in a new product. Mobile store in-store shopping experience: Demonstrate the capabilities of your product and how it will fit into the retail environment. Collaborate with companies in the industry: Support collaborations with other developers to share business, marketing, and code development. Convince people to buy your app: Show examples of great apps in the same category as your app, and describe how your app will be a better choice for someone looking for a better alternative. 9. How can you offer value to your fans and followers? For example, you could give away a limited number of codes to one person or a group. Or, you could host a contest to encourage people to spread the word about your app. For example, you could have a contest to have people write reviews for your app. Or you could offer a prize or have the first few reviews be free. 10. How can you inspire your fans and followers? To inspire your fans and followers, you can give them special privileges. For example, you could have people in your community vote on the best apps in the category you are in. Or, you could send your biggest fans, like your own employees or top distributors, a preview of your app. 11. How can you continue to improve your game and increase your business? This question has two parts: What improvements can you make to your app? How can you continue to make your app better? 82157476af
